FATAL ACCIDENT.

Mr. Jesse P. Lukens of Fourth and Verdugo Road received a telegram Friday evening of last week announcing the accidental death of his brother H. H. Lukens at Montgomery, Ala. the preceding day while en route for California. Mr. Lukens spent a year or two in Glendale with his brother three or four years ago and was on his way to this place to spend the remainder of his days when by a fall from the train or in some other manner not yet known he met his death. He had since leaving California been making his home with a daughter in West Philadelphia. Mr. Lukens was a man of cheerful temperament, and looked forward with almost a child's pleasure to getting to California. His sudden death was a severe shock to his relatives and many friends.

OLD SETTLERS' PICNIC.

The third annual picnic of the Old Settlers Association was held at Echo Park last Saturday and like its predecessors was a most enjoyable affair. The crowd was not large, but the spirit of the occasion pervaded all present. Old Settlers and newer ones mixed together about the festive board which was laden with appetizing refreshments. Coffee and lemonade were served, both contradicting in their quality the watery reputation usually attached to the picnic beverage. After luncheon Chairman Sherer called the meeting to order and spoke a few words of welcome and congratulation. He reminded his hearers especially that the association intended to exclude no one who was among the upbuilders of our valley whether their years of residence numbered three days or thirty years—that development was yet in its infancy and the people of fifty years hence would allude to us all as the pioneers. A number of old settlers were called upon for reminiscences and remarks in keeping with the occasion and their responses were interesting in the extreme. N. C. Burch, Esq., read extracts from Glendale correspondence in the Los Angeles Times twenty-two years ago, which recalled many interesting facts of early local history. Mr. Robert Devine, who came to California in the early fifties, related some most interesting incidents of those early days. Reverends Henry and Shoemaker of Tropico made humorous remarks and told stories which "pointed a moral" as well as amused the company. Mr. Edward Ayers related some interesting "facts" in regard to some of his neighbors of early days, evidently manufactured for the occasion, but none the less well received. Messrs. Griswold, Rice, Patterson, Goode and others spoke briefly. Election of officers resulted in the re-election of Mr. J. C. Sherer as president of the association, Mr. E. D. Goode, secretary, and an executive committee of which Mr. D. Griswold is chairman. The date of the annual picnic was fixed for the third Saturday in September hereafter.

"Shasta Daisies and Folks" and "New Ideals of Patriotism," are the subjects of Mrs. Tonger's lecture Wednesday next, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. Hear her.

Mrs. Nanno Woods' private kindergarten will open on the last Monday in September. In response to the general demand, Mrs. Woods has consented to take a limited number of first grade pupils. Specialist in junior piano and violin methods. Milford street.

INTERESTING ARMY STORY

As Told by Comrade W. C. Strickler

While publishing Army and Navy records of the Civil war I met two men who claimed to have saved the union, one by telling a lie and the other by disobeying orders, and I am inclined to think there is much truth in their claims.

I do not remember the name of the one who accomplished so much by false statements, he was a member of 151st New York Volunteer Infantry, belonging to the 1st Brigade 3d Division 6th Army corps. He was captured early in the Battle of Monocacy, Md., July 9, 1864, and was taken before Early's provost marshal and closely questioned, as was the custom "Yank, what troops are those over there?" "The 6th army corps," was the reply. "You are lying to me." "You are no gentleman," said the prisoner. "I am an unarmed prisoner of war and cannot resent that insult. I never allow any one to call me a liar without creating a disturbance. I am helpless." "I beg your pardon, Yank. I did not mean that." He wanted more information. "I will tell you why I cannot believe you. About a month ago when we left Cold Harbor, Va., the 6th crops was in our front. We have been marching ever since and now you say the 6th corps is before us. It is hard to believe you. How did you get here? "We came up on boats. The 'old man,' meaning Gen. Grant, thought you were going to Washington so he sent us up to escort you into the city." "Do you see that?" said the prisoner to the blue Greek cross on the top of his cap. "Don't you know what that is?" "That is the badge of the 6th corps, and if you don't believe the corps is over there just go over and you will find out." This information was conveyed to Gen. Jubel Early, commanding the Confederate troops and he believing what the prisoner said was more cautious in his attacks. He had engaged this corps before and in every case was defeated.

The battle opened about 8 a. m. and closed about 5 p. m. Late in the day Early succeeded in getting some of his forces across the Monocacy and flanked the Union troops under the command of Gen. Lew Wallace (author of Ben Hur), out of their intrenchments. 121 were killed, 190 wounded and about 400 captured. Then Early marched directly on Washington, his objective point. The object of this movement on the part of Early was to force Grant to release his hold on Lee's army in the wilderness of Virginia. Thus Early's division was detached from the Army of Northern Virginia and marched for our capital. The enemy reached the outer defences of Washington July 11th and lo! the other two divisions of the 6th corps were deploying in front of Fort Stevens. The truth was there was only one brigade of this corps at Monocacy together with a few "one hundred day men" from Ohio, consequently the prisoner by telling that the whole 6th corps was before him, the enemy was held at Monocacy several hours longer than he would have been if he had known that there was only a small force in his front instead of the whole 6th corps.

If Early could have reached Washington only a few hours earlier he might have captured the city before the other two divisions of the 6th corps could have gotten into position. If he had captured our capital, Louis Napoleon, emperor of France, would have recognized the Confederacy and the ruling class of Great Britain were waiting for some good excuse to follow France. This was a very critical period in our political history. If these two powerful nations had recognized the Confederacy it might have been the end of the American Union.

The prisoners taken at Moncacy were forced to march with the rebel cavalry. When they arrived before Washington they put up their portable forges and began to shoe their horses. This prisoner, being very tired, threw himself on the ground and was soon asleep. In a few hours one of the rebels came along, gave him a kick and said, "Here, you d——d Yank, get up if you want anything to eat," and handed him a cup of flour. He had not eaten anything for thirty hours. Soon after he managed to hide in a shock of wheat. He had not been there long when an old horse that had broken lose from his tether came to his hiding place and began to nibble at the wheat and soon pulled a sheaf down, exposing the Yankee. At first he drove the horse away, but when the animal returned to his fodder he concluded he had better let him eat in silence. If he should scare him any too often the Rebs might notice it and investigate. In a short time one of the enemy came to this same shock and drove the horse away, and then pulling down another sheaf placed it on the one the horse had thrown down and sat down. Soon another joined him and began to talk about the war. "I wish this d——d war was over. I have not heard from my family for over two years, and I don't believe we are going to lick the Yankees, anyhow." "Why?" asked his comrade. "Well, I'll tell you. Last year I was on the Gettysburg campaign and every town in Maryland and Pennsylvania we passed through the streets were lined with men looking at us marching by. The North has not begun to put her men in and you know we have every man of ours in." His comrade said, "Look how queer they have planted this wheat in rows." "Yes," said his comrade, "I saw them do that while attending school in Massachusets. They call that drilling. There is no use fighting them any longer. People who can do that cannot be defeated."

When Early retreated from before Washington this prisoner came out of his hiding place and walked into the city.

Annual Report First Methodist Church, Glendale, Cal.

Profoundly grateful to God for His great goodness to me, and appreciating the hearty co-operation of the members of this church throughout the year, I submit my first annual report in brief.

Sermons preached, 89; prayer meetings and devotional meetings conducted, 47; baptisms, 12; funerals, 7; pastoral calls, 500; conversions, 30; received by transfer, 47; upon probation 25; from probation, 21.

The Bible school, under the consecrated superintendency of T. W. Watson has grown in numbers, been well organized and become more efficient. A notable feature is the growth of the home department, under Mrs. Lennox, numbering 130. Only seven charges in the conference last year reported a larger department than this. The cradle roll, under Mrs. Hendershott, has reached a membership of 35. The Epworth league has been reorganized and under the presidency of W. L. Hovis, is planning great things and greater efficiency.

The Ladies' Aid society has done well, raising $140 during the year.

The two women's missionary societies have had a great year. The foreign society will report $1250, an increase of $400 over last year. The home reports $567, an increase of $400 over last year.

I shall be enabled to report an increase of the general missionary and benevolent funds. Altogether our church will report a total of $3500 for missionary, benevolent and reform purposes. Only seven churches in the conference made a better report than this last year.

I am also glad to report that in a few days the last dollar will be collected for paying the $1700 indebtedness on the church property.

In conclusion I desire to record that this has been one of the most pleasant years of my ministry. The members have been very appreciative, thoughtful and forbearing. As God knows my heart, I have tried to do the very best for you and I have never, intentionally, wronged a single member of this congregation. Conscious of much infirmity, and far from perfect service, I bring the year's work as an offering to my Savior's feet. Affectionately, your pastor,

J. F. HUHPHREY.

GLENDALE COUNTRY CLUB.

Saturday Night's Open Meeting.

It was men's night at the club house Saturday evening and the invitations given out by members seem to have been very generally accepted, for there appeared to be no vacancies. Members and guests together numbered about 100 and represented every section of the valley this side of Burbank. Cards and other games were indulged in until along about ten o'clock, when the three long tables in the banquet hall were filled by the guests and members called thither to partake of the hospitality of the club. Mr. V. Price Brown was the toast master of the evening and performed the duties of that position in a manner that made any other than the spirit of good fellowship and sociability impossible. He announced his intention to call upon every man present for a speech and kept his rash vow with a fine spirit of impartiality, for he saw to it that no one escaped. Some of those present announced that they were not speech makers, but nobody pretended to believe them. Indeed, the fact was never better exemplified that the American is always at home when it comes to speech making, than it was on this occasion. Eloquence flowed from most unexpected sources but the varieties were so innumerable and originality so notable that the time passed rapidly and no one had to be called down. As there were just about a hundred speeches, our reporter did not attempt to report even the best of them through a wholesale fear of the ninety and nine. The affair was a great success and there was a promise made that it would be repeated before many moons.

GLENDALE, CAL., SEPTEMBER 25, 1909

There will be nothing small about the reception to President Taft in Los Angeles at the Shrine Auditorium Oct. 11th. The feast will cost over $12,000. It is hoped that the distinguished guest will bring his appetite with him.

A court in a western state has recently decided that a woman teacher in the public schools was justified in whipping a pupil who persisted in smoking cigarets and who kicked her on the shins when she castigated him. Which shows that we may continue to have hope of the republic.

It is not often that we feel like congratulating an American girl when she marries a foreigner with a title, but if Miss Elkins should get the Duke of Abruzzi, we shall feel that Papa Elkins will have a man for a son-in-law.

The wisdom of the city trustees in readvertising for bids on the forty thousand dollars worth of city lighting bonds, was demonstrated when upon opening the second lot of bids last Wednesday evening it was found that the price had been raised by nearly a thousand dollars, the highest bid being that of Mr. Holliday for $1454 premium, which was accepted.

The life of Gov. John A. Johnson demonstrated as has that of Lincoln and many others of our great men, that in this age and generation as in those that have gone before, a man can rise superior to the accidents of birth and fortune and with but little assistance from the schools and all the accessories of twentieth century machinery for culture, may attain to the high places in life.

Ex-Supervisor Gallagher, one of San Francisco's boodling officials who confessed to having received $26,000 bribe money, finds that the statute of limitations prevents his now being punished, three years having elapsed since the commission of the offense. He will go to England to find a home, as he has discovered that a "strong prejudice exists against him." Is not San Francisco society a little severe on Mr. Gallagher, or has he lost the $26,000?

TAXES.

The special school tax levied this year in this section is as follows, per hundred dollars valuation:

Burbank	.80
Glendale	.83
Eagle Rock	.90
West Glendale	.83
Tropico	.73

The county supervisors have fixed the county and state rate at 90 cents, with a rate of .55 for road purposes outside of incorporated cities. This makes a rate of $1.45 plus the special school tax rate, outside of incorporated cities. The rate for Glendale city will be $1.73, in addition, of course, to the city tax rate. The county rate of 90 cents is apportioned as follows:

General fund, .13; salary fund, .085; county hospital and farm, .045; hospital building, .038; common schools, .155; exjosition, .022; interest and sinking fund, .022; real estate and county improvements, .071; macadam roads, interest and sinking fund, .008; state ratel .364; making the 90 cents per $100 valuation.

PREPARE FOR THE VISITORS.

Reports from railroad and hotel men indicate that the coming fall and winter months will witness the greatest rush of tourists and home seekers to Southern California that has ever been known. The return of "good times" brought about by the revival of business generally, good crops and other causes, accounts for this influx of visitors, the vanguard of whom are already arriving. Probably a larger proportion of these newcomers than heretofore, come with an intention of making a home in California if they find conditions to be what they have been led to expect. In every community that desires to receive its proportion of these home builders, some preparation should be made for their reception. It is of prime importance that they should be able to find in every place that they may desire to tarry, comfortable accommodations at reasonable prices.

Glendale is one of the places which by reason of its proximity to Los Angeles, may reasonably expect to be called upon for such accommodations by these visitors. And yet we have neither hotels nor restaurants sufficient to accommodate the usual number of winter guests who find their way here. There is an excellent chance here for a hotel carried on with tht special object of catering to the tourist trade. We already have excellent hotel and two or three good boarding houses, but their capacity is limited and none of them belong to the class of caravanseries that we have in mind. Our board of trade has been discussing methods of advertising, a matter of considerable importance, but the tourist arriving in our town during the coming winter stands a good chance of having to hunt from house to house for "bed and board," unless some additional provision is made for taking care of the people who may be lured hither by our seductive literature, including, of course, the GLENDALE NEWS.

PRESIDENT TAFT'S SPEECHES.

After six months of comparative silence since his occupation of the white house, President Taft has begun to talk. And his countrymen are glad to hear him express himself, for he talks evidently not for the sake of talking, but because he has something to say. He has expressed himself very frankly upon several subjects since he began to "swing around the circle" and some of his utterances are notable. His recent speech in explanation of the Payne tariff bill to which he recently put his signature, will go far toward creating a belief in the minds of the people that the new tariff bill is a good measure; not perfect, of course, but an improvement upon the old. A tariff bill is a somewhat tiresome array of figures to the average reader, and even to the usually well informed, is considerable of an enigma as a whole. Mr. Taft resognizes the fact that the average citizen cannot be expected to be familiar with its intricacies and in the speech alluded to dissects the measure and shows very clearly just what it is and wherein it is an improvement on the Dingley bill. His utterances in regard to judicial proceedings and the weakness of our judicial system, have also attracted general attention. Upon subjects connected with the law and its administration Mr. Taft is an authority, and when he declares his intention to endeavor to have some of the abuses that have crept into our judicial system remedied, we feel that it is now only a question of time when the matter will be attended to.

He has also uttered some very wholesome truths in regard to the railroads, monopolies and labor; in fact, he has showed by these recent speeches that he is not afraid to express his intelligent opinion upon any subject, and not only on account of his high and authoritative position, but because of his well-deserved reputation as a jurist and an administrator, his opinion will carry great weight.

THE STORM WATER.

The trustees acted wisely in instructing the street superintendent to put the streets in proper condition to carry off the storm water that may fall during the coming winter. This subject is one that every town or settlement in Southern California located near to the mountains has to wrestle with, and we no more than our neighbors. But, however, general the need the particular necessity as far as this portion of our valley is concerned is none the less imperative. No very serious damage has been done by flood waters in this section for many years, but the conditions are becoming more serious, not to say threatening, every year, as new homes continue to be erected here and there. We have above us a water course that is dry except in time of storm and in places the bed of that water course is filled in with sand until it is higher than the land on either side, the water only being confined therein by banks of a very temporary character. Owing to the absence of any particular authority exercised by any one over the stream, every property owner considers himself justified in time of danger in taking measures to protect his own property, even at the expense of his neighbor's; a condition promising serious results. The proposition advocated by Sidney Dell, Esq.,—the formation of a storm district to take care of the water and incidentally provide along the banks of the arroyo a fine boulevard from Verdugo Canyon to Los Angeles river, seems to us a larger and more expensive project than is warranted by the conditions, but we do believe that something should be done and done at once. It is a subject concerning all of this section of the San Fernando valley between Glendale's easterly city limits and the Burbank easterly line and from the mountains to the Los Angeles river, and some action should be taken without delay, as the rainy season is only sixty days distant. A public meeting to discuss the subject would be the proper way to arouse general interest in the matter.

THE DIRECT PRIMARY IN LOS ANGELES.

We have no confidence in the reformative effect of the direct primary law as enacted by the last legislature in obedience to the strenuous demand of a large number of well-meaning citizens. Theoretically it is a beautiful structure, labeled all over with promises, pleasing to the heart of the patriot, if he is sufficiently unsophisticated in political ways to believe them, but resting upon the same unstable foundation which has made the party convention system a failure, viz the unreliability of the great mass of the voters in matters political. By designating them as unreliable we mean that the voters are as unstable as water when it comes to a performance of their political duty. They are not ignorant, nor unpatriotic, but it is only by fits and starts that they can be aroused to the performance of their political duty as citizens. Instead of settling down to the hundrum political duty of the hour, making themselves familiar with local, state and national affairs, laying aside prejudice engendered by partisanship in their judgment of candidates, attending primaries, conventions and the various elections—they are more apt to work themselves up into a fine political frenzy at occasional periods and then take a long rest while the politicians pull the strings. So it does not matter whether we have the direct primaries or the party convention system, until we have a larger proportion of good citizens taking a general active interest in political affirs—there will be no genuine political reform. Yet always the power is with the people, and upon the majority of the voters whether active or passive, rests the responsibility. At the same time, while having no confidence in any permanent good to be achieved by the direct primary we favor giving it a fair trial, and the action of the Los Angeles Republican City committee in assuming to call a "Republican" convention, when the plain intent of the city's charter in adopting the direct primary law was to do away with party conventions, strikes us as unfair and calculated to confer no credit upon the Republican party of that city.

Of course, the attempt will be made to read out of the party such Republicans as do not support the action of the convention, but the party not being confined to the territorial limitations of the city of Los Angeles, will still have room for the residue. At best the ticket put up by the convention can only have the weight of a recommendation and it will be interesting to note whether such recommendation proves a bane or a blessing to the candidates whom it favors.

LOOKING UPWARD.

Who spends these glorious summer nights indoors, or being without looks not upward with some measure of intelligent understanding at the ceaseless procession of the stars, misses the chance for a spiritual uplift. Now that the moon does not appear to dim the sparkling of the distant suns and the steady glow of the nearer planets, the opportunity is excellent for the study of stars outside of and at tremendous distances beyond the solar system. About nine o'clock there rises over the mountains in the north eastward, the bright star Capella in the constellation of Auriga, the Charioteer. This is just on the easterly edge of the Milky Way that stretches a broad belt of diamond dust across the sky from northeast to southwest, the diamond dust consisting of stars innumerable fading away backward into space, beyond the scope of the most powerful glass that has ever been turned heavenward. Following up this shining pathway the gazer observes the constellations Perseus, Cassiopeia, and in the zenith, Cygnus, the swan. The bright star Deneb in this constellation is upposed to be in the body of the bird which is heading southward. Flying in the same direction ahead of the Swan is Aquila, the eagle, of which constellation the bright star is Altair. This star is the center one of three, the other two being of about the third magnitude. Down near the southern horizon just east of the Milky Way, is Sagittarius, the Archer (more like a dipper), who in legendary lore is eternally aiming at the Scorpion just across and west of the star-strewn pathway, its principal star Antares blazing in a red glory all its own low down in the horizon. Of course, the principal object in the heavens at this hour is blood-red Mars not very far above the hills in the east. This interesting planet, the fruitful cause of fanciful speculations on the part of astronomers as well as others, is now about 37 million miles from the earth, the nearest to us since 1892; at times owing to its peculiar orbit, it is nearly twice as far away. Saturn is just a little ways north of Mars, but comparatively inconspicuous. A little west of the zenith is the bright star Vega in the constellation of the Lyre. This is easily distinguished by its being the brightest star in the neighborhood of the zenth and by its bluish light. Two other faint stars near at hand, form with Vega a perfect triangle. The constellation Cygnus is sometimes called the Northern Cross, the star Deneb being the head of the cross, the length of it extending down the Milky Way. This constellation possesses special interest from the fact that it contains two stars which mark the extremes of distance, Deneb, although one of the first magnitude stars being so far away as to permit of no apparent parallax while one of the faint stars in the constellation (61 Cygnus) is one whose distance has been approximated as being one of the stars nearest to the earth—this distance is 10½ light years, or about 62 millions of millions of miles! The Dipper lies low in the north, the open bowl upward and the handle pointing westward to one of the brightest stars in the heavens, Arcturus, now low and dim in the northwest.

These are a few of the points of interest in the sky in these latter nights of summer; every month presents to us a new aspect of the heavens, for as the earth swings on its axis toward the east it gives a constantly changing point of view from which we look out upon the stellar universe.

The NEWS was in error last week in stating that the First National Bank had changed management, the announcement being premature. The old officers have been conducting the institution up to the present time and the change will take place between this time (Saturday) and Monday morning when it will open up under the control of the new managers, Messrs. Lee and Harrison. Further announcements will be made in our next issue.

A forty-five cent advertisement of wood for sale, published in the NEWS a week or so ago, caused all sorts of trouble for the advertiser, who sold out all the stock that he had within twenty-four hours after the paper appeared and then couldn't stop the people from coming after more. That's the way it works.

TEACHERS' TRAINING CLASS.

The teachers' training class met as usual in the First Baptist church, Thursday morning. Mrs. Lennox taught the lesson on "Temperance" for our next Sunday's lesson. Mrs. Teschan conducted the national service. A very interesting and profitable hour was spent.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Rev. Dr. Linscott for the International Newspaper Bible Study Club.

September 26th, 1909.

(Copyright, 1909, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)

Temperance Lesson. 1 Cor. x:23-33.

Golden Text—Let every one of us please his neighbor for his good to edification. Rom xv:2.

Verse 23—If a man could lawfully drink intoxicating liquor, in moderation, would it be a good thing to do, seeing so many thousands are being ruined yearly, by drinking, all of whom commenced to drink in moderation? (This question must be answered in writing by members of the club.)

Is a man honest, either in money or morals, who always goes as far as the law will allow him and no further?

If the general influence of anything we do, which may be lawful in itself, is injurious to ourselves or others, what is our duty?

What is the general influence of the drink traffic?

Verse 24—Why is not all our duty to our neighbor fulfilled when he have succeeded in doing him no harm?

Does Paul mean that we are to devote more time and thought to adding to our neighbor's wealth than we do to our own, and if not, what does he mean?

To how much of our respect is a man entitled, who cares nothing for the success of others, but is devoted wholly to his own?

Verse 25—In those days meat was offered to idols and afterward sold in the market for food, and some conscientious people objected to eating it for that reason. What did Paul advise in the circumstances, and why did he advise it?

Should we always pay the price demanded without question, or should we endeavor to buy for the lowest possible price?

Verse 26—If the earth is the Lord's why should not all real estate be public property?

How much of our property should we consider we own in our own right?

Verse 27—Is it right for a Christian to be intimate with worldly people, to attend their parties and to conform to their usages, when such usages are not actually sinful?

If wine is used at any party which a Christian attends, would it be right or wrong for him to drink it, and why?

Is it a Christian's right to do as he is "disposed" in any matter, or has God got a specific plan for him for all matters great and small?

Verses 28-30—Was the meat in itself any less good for having been offered to an idol?

Why does Paul here advise not to eat meat that had been offered to an idol, if any person calls attention to it who thought it wrong to do so?

Is it necessarily hypocrisy to do a thing behind a person's back, that you would not do before his face?

If no person ever got drunk, and if drinking was doing no harm, would it be right or wise for us to drink intoxicating liquor as a beverage?

Verse 31—Are all our actions taken by God as worship if they are done to his glory?

How is it possible for a Christian to do literally, everything he does, to the glory of God?

Verses 32-33—What should be our supreme desire in all our dealing with our fellow men?

PROPERTY VALUABLY IMPROVED.

Some time ago Charles M. Turck, whose former home was in Paris, France, bought the property on the northwest corner of Glendale avenue and Parke. This place consists of seven acres and was purchased from Mrs. A. J. Ross.

The name, "Seeknofurther," has been given to the place and signified the fact that after cruising around the world for three long years, Mr. and Mrs. Turck have decided that Tropico is the finest spot they have ever seen, so they have decided to stay right here.

Upon buying the place the owner started at once to improve it, and already has installed several unique features, including a Japanese tea house. This is delightfully arranged beneath a wide-spreading pepper tree, so that during the day a little lunch or tea may be served by a maid, and during the hottest day the little house will be cool and comfortable. Another improvement is the roof garden where in the evening or during the day one may ascend and get a broad view of the valley and hills.

A pretty little feature, and one that has probably never been seen in this state before is the army and navy hammock. The affair is practically a bed-hammock with sides, back and roof. It is suspended in the air by a strong rope tied to a limb overhead. It looks inviting and restful. A pretty grape arbor has been built at the side of the home running north to the driveday from the house. Surrounding the house many hundreds of fragrant flowers have been planted and at the sides of the lawn at the front a lattice fence has been built. Along the entire length of this lattice a climbing vine has been set and will soon be seen.

Numerous improvements are planned, but which will take weeks and months to complete. Among these is a circular driveway around the house. Both ends of this driveway will be on Glendale avenue and it will be lined with flowers of many kinds. The barn will be turned so as to face the driveway on the north. A large number of shade trees will be planted on the place. In the nooks and crotches of the trees cozy settees and hideaways will be erected. A decomposed gravel walk will be built from the home through the orange orchard to Parke avenue for convenience to and from the electric car. Time and expense will not be considered in the improvement of this place. Many new features which the proprietors have gathered in their extensive travels will be installed and when the work is finished this place will be second to none in the valley.

TROPICO CHURCH NOTES.

Methodist.

The annual rally and program given by the Sunday school of this church will be held in the church edifice tomorrow morning. The program will take the place of the regular preaching service at 11 o'clock and will be given entirely by the members of the Sunday school. It is expected that the room will be decorated with autumn leaves and sheaves of wheat. In the absence of the pastor there will be no service Sunday evening.

This week is conference week in this church, the conference being held at San Diego. The pastor of this church left Wednesday morning and will be away the remainder of the week.

A farewell service was given to Rev. J. H. Henry in this church last Sunday evening. The musical program was given by Earl B. Vallentine, assisted by the Tropico orchestra, and consisted of a series of pretty musical numbers, which were very well rendered, and an address by the pastor on "The Relation of Music to the Church and Sunday School."

Presbyterian.

There will not be service at this church tomorrow evening. The members of this church will attend the 25th anniversary service of the Presbyterian church of Glendale in that church's auditorium. Tomorrow morning the regular preaching will be dispensed with and give place to the communion and the reception of new members. It is hoped that a good attendance will be present at this service.

A supper was given in the parlors of the church Wednesday evening by the Ladies' Aid of this church, which was well attended. As the affair was in the church no admission was charged, but after the dinner a silver offering was taken. The affair was one of the good social times for which the ladies of this church are noted. After the supper a short program was given.

A preparatory prayer meeting was held in the church auditorium Thursday evening. This service was held to prepare the people who will unite with the church tomorrow evening, for their entrance into the church.

The Ladies' Aid of the church held their regular weekly business meeting at the church Wednesday afternoon. Until the end of the year these meetings will be held every week.

TO PUT IN IMPROVEMENTS.

Messrs. Stroble, Mehle, Dr. Rudy and W. E. Borthick, who own property on Eleventh street, in this place, have decided to put in quite a number of improvements on their places. Some work will be done to the yards toward beautifying the places with flowers and shrubbery and the like. Besides this, cement sidewalking and curbing will be installed. 470 running feet of curbing will be put in and 2350 square feet of sidewalk will be laid. Some of this work will be done on Brand boulevard, but the majority will be along Eleventh street.

PRETTY DINNER PARTY.

Mrs. Joseph Griffen entertained with a dinner party, dainty in all of its appointments at her home on Central avenue, Thursday evening. Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Carl Overhulser, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Simpson, Mr. and Mrs. Embree Easley, Mrs. Sidney Eickenberry, Mrs. William Simpson, Miss Bessie Simpson, Miss Hazel Eickenberry and Miss Leola Simpson, all of Los Angeles. Miss Virginia Boring and Helen Griffen of Tropico.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM ALASKA.

The ladies of N. P. Banks W. R. C. are in receipt of the following interesting letter from one of their members, Mrs. Lyda S. Neal, who left Glendale the first of June to join Mr. Neal in Alaska where the latter is superintendent of the experimental agricultural station at Fairbanks.

"Fairbanks, Alaska, Aug. 8, 1909.

"To N. P. Banks W. R. C.,
"Tropico, Cal.

"My Dear Friends: Leaving Redondo June 10th, 1909, at 2 p. m., we arrived at Seattle at midnight of the 14th, having called in San Francisco a few hours. Leaving Seattle Sunday evening, June 20th, at 9 o'clock. As the twinkling lights from fast receding shore disappeared I realized I was leaving my dear parents and friends for a far distant land, the tears flowed unchecked. . .

"The scenery is certainly grand passing through narrow channels, only a stone's throw to land, then widening out miles and miles from shore to shore. The towering snow-capped mountains in the distance making the mountains in the foreground, covered with vegetation, look most beautiful. Here and there miniature waterfalls, charging down the mountain sides fed by the numerous patches of snow. One is surprised to see a dwelling and signs of life in a seeming wilderness, then a village comes to view. Everything passing as in a grand panorama. Wrangell Narrows is twenty-two miles long, but it was our misfortune to pass through the narrows during the night, missing all of the splendors. We entered the channel in time to enjoy one of the most beautiful sunsets that eye ever beheld. The captain of the vessel took the wheel in the most dangerous parts of the channel, the ship just passing the numerous buoys and danger signs. We made several stops during the trip, but there was nothing of especial interest connected with these stops.

"At 4:30 p. m., June 24th we landed at Skaguay, stopping at the hotel until the next morning, when at 9:30 o'clock we boarded the White Pass and Yukon railroad train that took us over the mountains to the Yukon river.

"I should not make any attempt to describe the scenery through the White river, as my words would be an insult to nature. I would judge this grand canyon similar to the Colorado. Those towering mountains seemingly reaching to the heavens then to look down, down, hundreds of feet below to the river dashing and roaring on to the Pacific.

"So we travel on at a snail's pace, winding around switch backs, over bridges and through tunnels, passing vegetation, beautiful in all of its spring coloring, with snow and waterfalls. Gradually leaving the dangerous pass till we reach the summit where we stop, as it seems, to rest. Passing on, we soon come to Lake Bennett, where the call, "20 minutes for dinner," is a very welcome announcement. . . All enjoyed a bountiful dinner, good, wholesome and nicely prepared on a neatly arranged table. While 50 cents each is a most reasonable price. The scenery is not nearly so grand the remainder of the journey. We arrived at White Horse, the connecting point of railroad and steamer, at 6:30 p. m. and gladly sought the hotel, a block away, where we found excellent accommodations. Remaining until noon of the 28th, when we started down the Yukon, on the steamer White Horse, pushing a scow loaded with cattle ahead of us. From White Horse to Dawson one is passing through a very mountainous country, apparently uninhabited, save in a few little villages along the bank of the river. There is very little excitement other than sticking on a sand bar, until we shoot the Five Finger Rapids, so called from five gigantic boulders directly in our path, crossing the river like huge stepping stones. There are two small passes, only one being passable, yet seeming an impossibility. As we approach this pass, the captain is at the wheel, the passengers watching breathlessly, the huge engines stop, we float slowly into the current, going quietly but quickly over the dangerous point, while every one breathes freely once more. A few hours more and we are at Dawson. Having heard so much about this rich little mining town I was very anxious to see it, but the feeling was one of disappointment and almost sadness, when I saw the British flag floating, and missing our beautiful stars and stripes. I realized, of course, that I was in Canada, Y. T., under King Edward's rule, in a strange town, among strangers, so far from dear old home, at Tropico, and another week's journey to my husband. I was indeed lonely. The next morning the first sight to greet my eyes was the stars and stripes, floating between two British flags, for it was July 1, Dominion Day. On the 3d of July I left on the steamer Delta for Fort Gibbins, changing there for steamer Schwatka, where we had a large barge of freight, besides the cattle to push up the Tanana river. We were on the Tanana four days, landing in Fairbanks at midnight, July 8th, but we did not mind that, as it was daylight and the long journey was ended. Since leaving Redondo, Marie and I have been on five different steamers, and one railroad. When we return to California we expect to return by aeroplane.

"Yours in F. C. & L.,
"LYDA S. NEAL."

THE WELCOME GUEST.

When with care we're weary grown
With life's trials sad depressed
And the day seems drear and lone
He comes the welcome guest.

He greets us with a smile,
Clasps our hand in hearty way,
Saying pleasant words the while,
Helps us work and calls it play.

He tells no tales of woe,
Talks not of doubts and fears,
Speaks well of friend and foe,
May he greet us many years.
